AS/NZS 4801 | OHSAS 18001 CERTIFICATION

Demonstrate Commitment to Safety & Hazard Management

BUSINESS CHALLENGE

Organisations are increasingly concerned about achieving and demonstrating sound Occupational Health and Safety performance to their shareholders, employees, clients and other stakeholders. The need to manage hazards, minimise risk and improve business activities, products and services, is critical to the sustainability of any business operating in industry or commercial environments.

Concern from interested stakeholders, stringent legislation, economic policies, HR management policies and many other measures all contribute to Occupational Health and Safety (OH&S) business requirements to protect employees and the public. A clear, transparent and demonstrated commitment to OH&S is an essential component to any business strategy moving forward.

SOLUTION

What is AS/NZS 4801 / OHSAS 18001? AS/NZS 4801 is an Australian and New Zealand standard and OHSAS 18001 is an international standard. Both of these certifications clearly demonstrate that an organisation has knowledge of, and control over, all relevant hazards that may exist as a result of operations or abnormal conditions. These certifications also demonstrate a strong commitment to ongoing improvement of safety performance.

- Increased control and reduction of hazards through the setting of achievable and measurable objectives and targets.

  - Stage 2 – evaluation of implementation, including the effectiveness of the management system of the organisation;
- A certificate valid for 3 years is issued upon satisfactory results of stage 2 audit
